CONVERGENCE PROGRAM ACROSS TPCODL PROJECTS

A convergence program was organized at the Adhikaar Centre in Kankadahada, Dhenkanal, bringing together three key projects - Adhikaar, Aarogya, and Vidya, supported by TPCODL. The objective was to strengthen interlinkages among these projects to enable the teams to work collectively towards shared goals. The event was graced by representatives from TPCODL, Mahashakti Foundation, Leora Foundation, and Shree Jagannath Hospital. The session highlighted the specific focus areas of each project: Aarogya on health awareness and services, Vidya on women's education, and Adhikaar on facilitating access to government entitlements and social security benefits.

UTEIVALLEY FPO AGGREGATES 253 QUINTALS OF MAIZE

A maize cluster covering 100 acres of land has been established by Uteivalley FPO in Jhaliaguba and Ambagoan, M. Rampur, promoted by Mahashakti Foundation under the Government of India's Central Sector Scheme for promotion of 10,000 FPOs, supported by NABARD - National Bank for Agriculture and Rural Development. Following the harvest, the FPO facilitated the aggregation and procurement of 253 quintals of maize, which was supplied to Krishna Mill, Kantabanji, thereby strengthening price realization and enhancing producer-level income outcomes.

SUCCESS STORY

Ms. Soudamini Pradhan, aged 39, lives in Basiapada village under Birsinghgarh Panchayat in Jujomura block. She completed her education up to Class 10 and is a single parent caring for her 13-year-old daughter, who is currently in Class 9. After the passing of her husband, she has been independently managing both her household as well as the farmland that supports their livelihood. The sudden shift from shared responsibilities to single-handedly running the family placed significant pressure on her, but she continued to rely on agriculture as her primary source of income. Her engagement with community groups gradually opened the door to new opportunities that could strengthen her agricultural work.

Soudamini is an active member of the Maa Jhadeswari Producer Group. Through this platform, she was selected for support under the APC Project, supported by the Government of Odisha, which had converged with the Horticulture Department to promote vegetable cultivation among small and marginal farmers. As part of this initiative, she received 250 grams of okra seed, which she decided to cultivate on 50 decimals of her land. The seed distribution took place at a crucial time in the agricultural calendar, enabling her to plan and prepare her land without delay. She completed the plantation within a month, ensuring proper spacing and seed placement to achieve healthy crop establishment.

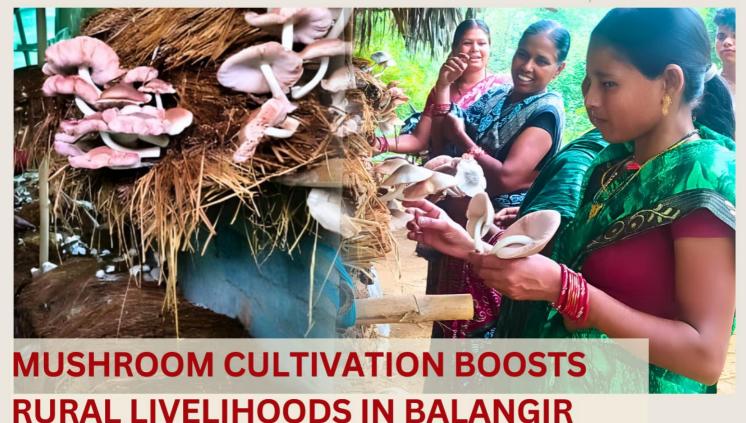

Once the crop cycle began, she followed all required field practices with consistency. This included regular weeding to prevent nutrient loss, regular irrigation to maintain soil moisture, careful monitoring for pest infestation, and appropriate use of organic or recommended inputs whenever required. Her disciplined approach helped her manage the field effectively even without additional labour support. Because of her timely interventions and the suitability of the crop to local conditions, the okra plants performed well throughout the season.

At harvest, Soudamini produced more than 11 quintals of okra. She sold the produce in the local market at fair prices and earned over ₹29,000 during the season. This income was significant for her household, enabling her to meet daily needs, manage school-related expenses for her daughter, and reduce the financial pressure she had been facing. For a single parent managing limited land resources, this outcome was both encouraging and stabilizing.

The experience has strengthened her confidence in vegetable cultivation and increased her interest in continuing similar crop cycles in the coming seasons. Her progress has gained attention within the village, and other women are now approaching her to understand the process and consider taking up similar livelihoods under Producer Groups. Her case demonstrates the practical impact of timely support, convergence initiatives, and consistent field-level effort, showing how even a modest intervention can contribute meaningfully to improving the lives of smallholder women farmers.

SUCCESS STORY

Rural livelihoods in Balangir district continue to depend primarily on agriculture, a sector marked by low productivity, seasonality of income, and limited avenues for diversification. In response to these persistent challenges, Mahashakti Foundation introduced a community-based mushroom cultivation initiative in Gudvella block under its Diversifying Rural Income & Women Entrepreneurship (DRIWE) theme, implemented as part of the ISRRRC project supported by Reliance Foundation. The intervention aims to expand income opportunities for rural households while strengthening women's participation in local enterprise development. The program focuses on practical training, input support, and continuous technical guidance, enabling women from Self-Help Groups (SHGs) to adopt a low-cost, climate-resilient, and nutrition-rich livelihood option that can generate returns throughout the year.

The initiative currently covers four villages across three Gram Panchayats of Gudvella block, engaging 10 SHGs and more than 100 women beneficiaries. With technical support, 900 mushroom beds have been prepared using locally available materials, and SHG members have been trained in all essential stages of cultivation, including spawn inoculation, moisture management, harvesting, and post-harvest handling. Early results have been encouraging, with 27 kilograms of fresh mushrooms harvested to date.

The implementation process also highlighted several operational challenges. For many SHG members, mushroom cultivation was a new activity, necessitating repeated hands-on demonstrations and close follow-up. Fluctuations in temperature and humidity affected the growing environment, bringing attention to the need for improved low-cost structures. Market access remains a concern due to limited aggregation capacities and the absence of structured linkages. Additionally, dependence on external spawn suppliers caused delays in bed preparation during the initial phase.

Despite this, the initiative has shown strong potential to evolve into a scalable, women-centric livelihood model. The next phase of the program will focus on developing village-level mushroom clusters, strengthening collective marketing, and connecting SHGs with FPOs and local retail markets to improve price realization. Plans are underway to explore a low-cost spawn production unit within the block and integrate mushroom cultivation into broader livelihood diversification efforts.

The mushroom cultivation initiative in Gudvella block demonstrates how targeted grassroots interventions, supported by active community participation and institutional guidance, can broaden livelihood opportunities for rural women. With continued hand-holding support and enhanced market linkages, the involved SHGs are positioned to progress toward self-reliant micro-enterprise development.
